

Beating the Labyrinth: The Sustainability of International Co-operation Programmes in Higher Education (Paperback)

By Ad Boeren

Thela Thesis, Netherlands, 2003. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 234 x 163 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. In a world characterized by globalization processes, nations need their own higher education systems more than ever, yet international co-operation is the key to survival in the 21st century. To be effectively cosmopolitan however, both individuals and nations need a strong identity, an understanding that new developments are often both an opportunity and a threat, as well as the intellectual stamina to make sound judgements and well-founded distinctions between opportunities and threats. A sustainable higher education structure is therefore indispensable if a nation is to take advantage of the possibilities the world offers, and if it wants to participate meaningfully in the global concert. Despite the enormous growth - both quantitatively and qualitatively - of higher education in the South, research is still almost a monopoly of the North. Only 1 of scientific research is done outside the traditional industrialized countries in the northern hemisphere. One way to fill that gap is to promote international co-operation between Northern and Southern institutes of higher education aimed at supporting counterparts in the developing nations. Is this method effective? Does it work? Does it lead...
