Houghton Mifflin. 1 Laminated Cover(s), 2010. hard. Book Condition: New. This is a particularly beautiful adaptation of Antoine de Saint-Exupéry's classic parable for children and adults, in which a mysterious child appears to a pilot stranded in the desert. French comic book artist Joann Sfar known in this country for The Rabbi's Cat and the Eisner Awardwinning Little Vampire series captures the elusive qualities of the tale in deceptively simple ink and color drawings, for readers 9 and up."The graphic novel's text conveys the wisdom of the original book, in which a childlike perspective illuminates the absurdity of adult living while attaining its own hard-won maturity. Sfar's loose but masterful art supplements the book's themes with a supple visual style that appears accessibly artless on its surface, but occasionally blossoms into symbolism and abstraction. The book abounds with individual panels that are profound in their meaning and striking in their simplicity."Publishers Weekly (starred review)"Always generous, always sensitive, Sfar has succeeded in giving life to the aviator and his Petit Prince. Any successful adaptation is a revelation. This is faithful to the text, but the aesthetics of Sfar . reveal the full dimension of melancholy and contemplation."Lire (Paris)"Sfar is very respectful of the original writing and illustrations, but his simple yet nuanced artwork brings another layer of depth to the story, his use of shadows and close-ups reinforcing the mood of this piece. His adaptation is as classic as the original, and it will bring this quiet yet thought-provoking story to a new generation of readers."School Library Journal (starred review) 110.
