MANUAL TRAINING AS A FACTOR IN PHYSICAL EDUCATION. Paper read before the Boston Society for the Advancement of Physical Education, Feb. li, 1897. It is very gratifying to me to be invited to say a few words to this learned society on the possibilities of manual training as a factor in physical education. I have devoted many years to the study and teaching of manual training, not with a view to rapidly acquiring skill, but always looking upon it as a branch of general education. I hope that my strong interest in my subject, together with the pictures and tools I have brought with me, will enable me to make my ideas clear to you. I cannot, of course, answer for all the methods of manual training practised in the schools. I shall only speak of my own personal aims and experience, and...
